研究成果の概要(和文):本研究は、19世紀後半の英米の作家が太平洋イメージを構築する際に、テキストの余白が中心的な場となったことを明らかにした。このような文章は、まとまったテキストと断片的な注釈の組み合わせによって、作家たちがこの地域のために構築しようとしていた包括的アイデンティティと、異なる歴史、文化、言語を持つ複雑に連結した群島としてのこの地域の地理的現実との間の緊張に対応していた。本研究は、査読付きの書籍や学術誌に掲載され、日本、ドイツ、英国、アイルランド、オーストラリア、台湾、米国で研究発表が行われる等、多くの成果を上げている。さらに、この研究をインターメディア研究の視点と対話させた単著を出版する予定である。

研究成果の学術的意義や社会的意義

This research examines how the conventions of the printed book shape Pacific representations and vice versa. The research sheds new light on the history of British and American Imperialsim and advances our understanding of how cultural images of the Pacific were created.

研究成果の概要(英文): This research demonstrated that that the textual margins provided a central site in which British and American writers of the long nineteenth century constructed the Pacific. Such writings' combination of cohesive text and fragmentary notes responded to the tension between the comprehensible identity writers were attempting to construct for the region, and the area's geographical reality as a complexity of interlinked archipelagos with distinct histories, cultures and languages.

The research led to a number of peer-reviewed book chapters and journal artciles, as well as research presentaitons in Japan, Germany, the UK, Ireland, Australia, Taiwan and the USA. A further monograph placing this research in dialogue with perspectives in intermedia studies is planned.

1.研究開始当初の背景

Background of research

As Rod Edmond has pointed out, the turn of the nineteenth century saw a dramatic change in the structure of English travel-writing about the Pacific: "[w]hereas facts in eighteenth-century travel fiction typically form a seamless part of the text, in the nineteenth century they separate out from romance to become weighty ballast in the form of notes" (Representing the South Pacific, p. 64). This research project builds on recent perspectives in Pacific studies, the history of the book and Romantic period studies to examine the ways literary depictions of the Pacific across the nineteenth century fused Romantic imaginative representation with Enlightenment verification in their notes, thereby creating a synthesis of visionary enthusiasm and meticulous empiricism that marked European Imperialism.

2.研究の目的

Purpose of research

In the period between Captain Cook's voyage in 1768 to the establishment of modern ethnography in the early decades of the twentieth century, a number of important writers and travelers created depictions of the Pacific that fused literary and anthropological methods of representation. Such writings are notable for their extensive use of annotation: from the famous marginal gloss that accompanied Samuel Taylor Coleridge's 1817 version of "The Rime of the Ancient Mariner" to the dry, witty annotation Lord Byron adds to The Island (1823); Edgar Allan Poe's footnotes for The Narrative of Arthur Pym of Nantucket (1838) to Robert Louis Stevenson's ethnographic annotations for "The Song of Rahéro" (1890). This monograph seeks to demonstrate the crucial role these frequently overlooked elements played in the imaginative construction of the Pacific in American and British writing across the long nineteenth century.

3.研究の方法

Method of research

My research drew on archival, library and electronic resources at Meiji University, the British Library, the National Library of Scotland and the National Library of Ausralia. During the period, I disseminated my research internationally via many conferences and symposia. I organized a day symposium on "English Literature and the Pacific" (21 January 2023) and research workshops at Meiji and Edinburgh University. I gave invited talks at University of Tokyo (June 2019) University of Tübingen, Germany (April 2020), National Chengchi University, Taiwan (May 2022) and La Trobe University, Australia (March 2023). I also gave papers at conferences in Japan, the UK, Ireland, Australia and the USA.

4. 研究成果

The main outcomes of this research have been (1) an article on Herman Melville's annotation for Typee (1846) (2) a book chapter on Roland Barthes' footnotes (3) a book chapter on Robert Louis Stevenson's annotations (4) a book chapter on Percy Bysshe Shelley's footnotes (5) an article on Edgar Allan Poe's annotations (5) the development of a series with Palgrave titled "Asia-Pacific and Literature in English", of which I am one of the co-editors (alongside Shun-liang Chao, Steve Clark, Tristanne Connolly, and Laurence Williams) (6) one international conference and three international workshops completed. I also developed an interested in intermedia and cinema studies that led to (1) the completion of an edited collection, with Dr. Fabien Arribert-Narce, entitled Intermedial Encounters Between Image, Music and Text: With and Beyond Roland Barthes, for which I co-wrote the "Introduction" and wrote one chapter (2) the completion of a journal article on Kurosawa and Shakespeare (3) the completion of a successful Kakenhi application, Pacific Intermediality, 1768-2022, which draws together these two interests by considering intermediality in Anglophone representaitons of the Pacific. I have also been contracted to co-edit with Peter Kitson and Rosinka Chaudhuri a major scholarly collection entitled The Bloomsbury Handbook of Romanticism and Asia, (contracted to be published in 2025 with Bloomsbury Academic).
